Suggested uses:

Game cards:	Make two copies of the game cards. Laminate and cut out. Use for playing "go fish" or a memory game.
Bingo boards:	Print and laminate. Play in the traditional manner. This can be played until someone gets three in a row. The game can be continued as blackout, where all of the spaces are covered, which allows for more practice.
Sorting mat:	Print and laminate the sorting mat and three pages of cards. Cut apart the cards. Have the students identify the card as "he" "she" or "they." Can they think of a sentence using each pronoun?
Game board:	Use the game cards with the game board. Say the sentence or make up a sentence about each card before using the spinner or dice to make a move. I tell them they must earn their turn! OR they can simply describe each picture they land on.
Homework:	Send the game cards home for more practice. This is an affordable way to get some carryover going at home.

Here are some kids having fun in the yard. Do you see someone helping a plant to grow? What is she doing to the plant? Why? Why do you think the boy is digging in the dirt? How many kids do you see on the swing set? What do you like to play with in your back yard or at the park?

Describe and color the scene

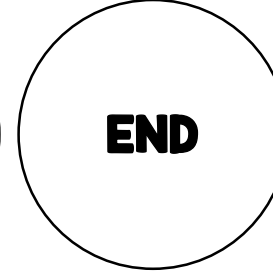

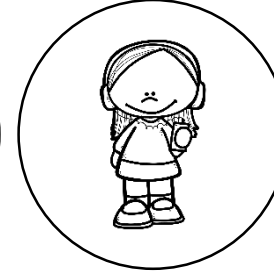

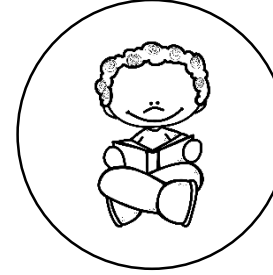

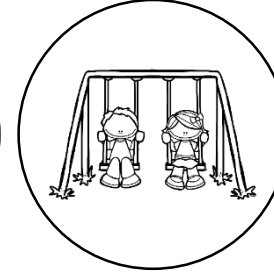

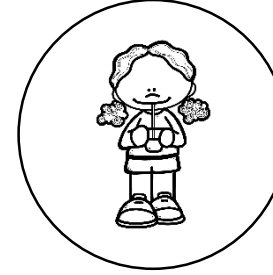

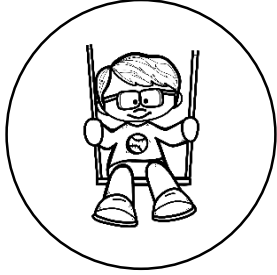

The kitchen is a busy place! Who is cooking dinner here? Who cooks dinner for you? The baby is having something to eat. Why does someone have to feed him? Can you tell who is helping with chores? What are they doing? What do you do to help at home?
